Await Dead Son's Return

BARSTOW, Calif. (AP) — Lawrence and Alice Parker believe their dead son will be resurrected four days after he is buried.

Wesley, an 11-year-old diabetic, died last Wednesday.

His parents had thrown away his insulin three days before, saying they believed he had been cured by an unidentified faith healer at their Assembly of God church here.

"The Lord told us he would raise Wesley," Parker said at the boy's memorial service Sunday. "We thought it would be today, but the Lord didn't say when. We will arrange for burial, and we believe Wesley will be raised after four days in the grave."

On Aug. 19, the Parkers took their son to a man at their Sunday church service who said he had conquered Wesley's disease by faith.

"We bombarded heaven," said Mrs. Parker, 29.

"We prayed without ceasing from Tuesday morning to Wednesday afternoon."

The parents considered buying more insulin when their son lapsed into unconsciousness Tuesday, but the 34-year-old father said: "I knew then the diabetes is caused by two demons and that we could no longer give insulin without inviting the demons back."

The parents called on Gary Nash, pastor of their church, to pray with them. Nash said he strongly advised the Parkers to call a doctor but the parents said they believed "in healing by faith."

Police, alerted about the death by an anonymous caller, said the case's legal aspects were being reviewed by the San Bernardino County district attorney's office.

The parents would not permit an autopsy and at first refused to have the body embalmed, though they agreed to that later.

The mother explained: "Christ is going to have to replace the blood that's full of sugar anyway, so it might as well be embalming fluid. If we hadn't done it, people might say he was in a deep coma and not believe the miracle."

About 200 persons attended the ceremony at the funeral home chapel Sunday, a spokesman said.

About 30 participants sang with the Parkers, their two daughters and another son, Jay. At one point, children in the chapel were called to lay hands on the body and shout for Wesley to rise from the coffin.

The parents left the chapel after four hours of prayer. They said they were going to a birthday party for son Jay, 2 years old Sunday.

Parker said he would make burial arrangements today. But he said details of the burial were unimportant because Wesley is "not going to stay there."

Chicago Papers In Short Supply

Paper mill and railroad strikes in Canada have caused a shortage of Chicago papers in the Twin Cities area, and one local news dealer said he was warned he may not get any Chicago papers in the future.

Pat O'Neil, a salesman for Michiana News Service (formerly Twin Cities News Agency) said he had very limited supplies of the Chicago Sun Times yesterday, but had normal supplies of the Tribune.

O'Neil said the circulation departments for the four Chicago papers, the Tribune, Sun Times, Daily News, and Today, informed him that they may be forced to discontinue supplying him with papers unless there is a break in the strikes.

The shortages of paper are causing increasing problem in the supply and availability of newspapers across the country, in addition to such basic items as business forms, corrugated boxes, waxed paper, and paper bags.

Most of the attention so far has been focused on newspapers, some of which have run low on newsprint because of the strikes. But increasingly tight situations are being reported in a wide variety of other paper products.

In Washington, D.C., where paperwork is a legendary part of government, the General Services Administration reports that paper inventories are short millions of pounds, though the shortage hasn't affected government operations. An emergency procurement system based on national security priorities has been invoked "seven or eight times" in the recent past, according to a GSA spokesman.

The strikes have shut down paper mills and stopped all rail service in Canada.

The strikes have compounded the paper shortage which was becoming a problem because demand was nearly outstripping supply, and it takes several years to increase production.

A principal consideration is that new paper mills are costly and take two to four years to build, observers say. Several years ago, there was a glut of paper, prices were low, and

Three men and a woman were arrested early this morning when police from three agencies broke up an alleged attempted burglary at the Bargain Center clothing store, 1613 M-139 Benton township, police reported.

Police said 97 articles of clothing, valued at $4,700, had been stuffed into the trunk of a car and spilled onto the ground when officers arrived. Included were several leather coats.

Benton township police identified the four as Leo Williams, 18, and Anthony Martin, 20, both of 1262 Blossom Lane; Lamond Ware, 21, of 1261 Blossom Lane, Benton township; and Gwenda Martin, 18, of Chicago.

Officers from the Berrien county sheriff's department, the Benton Harbor state police post and the township force participated in the arrests, responding to an alarm which sounded at township headquarters at 3:50 a.m.

Entry was gained to the building by breaking out glass in the front door, officers said.

First car on the scene, reportedly only three minutes after the alarm sounded, was from the sheriff's department. Officers said the suspects did not resist arrest, although one attempted to hide beneath the rear of the car and the pile of clothing behind it.

Strike Hurts Canadian Car Plants

DETROIT (AP) — A Canadian railroad strike is affecting the big three automakers, forcing plant closings in the Canadian divisions of General Motors, Chrysler and Ford.

A GM spokesman in Detroit said almost 10,000 workers in Oshawa and St. Catharines, Ont., plants will be laid off for an "indefinite" period, since those plants can't get needed parts.

"Disastrous" was the word a Chrysler official used to describe the parts shortage affecting that company.

"Like everyone else, we are scrambling for whatever trucks are available, but these just aren't enough to keep us going indefinitely," said Walter McCall.

Halt Attempt To Capture Gunman

Gas Attack Would Be Fatal To Hostages

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)

— The besieged gunman holding four hostages in a locked bank vault told police early today that he had tied them to the walls. He said that if anesthetizing gas were pumped in they would strangle when they lost consciousness.

Police immediately suspended operations to capture the gunman and a convicted murderer with him and free the three young women and a man taken hostage last Thursday.

The police agreed to a truce until 9 a.m. EDT, lowered sandwiches and drinking water through an opening they had drilled in the ceiling of the vault, and withdrew their forces from the area. They gave no indication what they would do when the truce ended.

"We would not like to see these young people hanged, that's why we agreed to a truce," said Police Chief Curt Lindroth.

"We are dealing with an inhuman being who does not hesitate at anything. We could hear the girls plead for their lives. Their despair was genuine.

"They are still alive, but I don't know what their condition is now."

Lindroth would not say what kind of gas might have been used. But he said if it were employed, it would put the six out in about three minutes.

Police began drilling through the ceiling of the 19-by-40-foot vault Sunday night in apparent preparation for the gas attack. The gunman fired one shot into the vault's ventilator drum during the drilling, but nobody was hit.

The police put one hole into the vault, then decided they

Bullet Strikes Passenger In Navy Transport Plane

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — A four-engine U.S. Navy transport plane was hit by a bullet Sunday night in apparent preparation for the gas attack. The gunman fired one shot into the vault's ventilator drum during the drilling, but nobody was hit.

Lt. Cmdr. Norris G. Counts of Walled Lake, one of 10 people aboard the C141, received superficial wounds when the bullet struck him in the leg, according to the spokesman.

Reports published prior to the incident said a unit of the Michigan Air National Guard may be armed with nuclear weapons within a year.

According to informed sources, the Pentagon is actively considering arming the 191st Fighter Interceptor Group's F100 supersonic jets with atomic weapons.

The Navy spokesman said the plane, en route to a routine training mission, was circling at an altitude of 1,000 feet prior to making a landing approach at Selfridge Air National Guard Base when the bullet hit the No. 3 engine propeller. It entered the right side of the craft.

He said Navy officials were investigating the source of the shot, adding it was "hard to say" whether someone purposely fired the bullet at the plane.

The bullet was recovered, but its caliber had not yet been determined, the spokesman said.

The spokesman said the crew reported hearing at least one shot.

For More Eggs

Our farm readers specializing in poultry products may feel we have flipped on this one, but for what it's worth the latest issue of National Geographic magazine might have an idea on eggs.

Not too many months ago eggs spilled all over the grocery shelves.

Today, thanks to some dislocations in the grain market, Grade A Large are selling for a buck a dozen and are not always the easiest item to latch on to.

Besides high feed costs, more and more housewives are telling the medics to stop worrying over the cholesterol count as they serve up an omelette instead of a steak which is even harder to come by.

One solution to the price-supply jam would be more productive hens.

Some investigation by a National Geographic reporter indicates Prof. Yoshiyuki Harada of Tottori University and Yukio Yosimura, a chicken raiser in Gotsu, Japan, may have the clue.

Four years Gotsu's town fathers repaired a drainage ditch flowing near Mr. Yosimura's chicken coop.

Before the repairs his 800 hens were dropping about 3,200 eggs every five days.

After the repairs they upped the average to 5,600.

Experts from a livestock experimental station at Gotsu checked into the phenomenon but failed to come up with a satisfactory answer for it.

Last year a poultryman from another province borrowed a few of Mr. Yosimura's prodigious layers.

Taken from their Gotsu coop, the birds lapsed back into their former laying habit.

The poultryman returned with a tape recorder to Mr. Yosimura's coop where he picked up every sound.

Then he began playing the tape continuously in his coop.

Sure enough his hens came up to Mr. Yosimura's productivity.

Prof. Harada then analyzed the tape and finally isolated the stimulus.

It is the sound of the water gurgling through the repaired drain.

Light is a known stimulant for hormonal secretions in chickens.

Prof. Harada concludes sound can exert the same effect.

The water passing through the drain, he reasons, probably includes just the right wave length and rhythm to cause Henny Penny to do better.

Not every water sound, we take it, will do. A tape of Lake Michigan on a rampage might well provoke Henny Penny to cackle a "forget it."

Going at the current chicken and the egg problem from the other direction, some French breeders are zeroing in on the chicken dinner.

They have developed a dwarf pullet whose birdlike appetite sharply reduces what it costs to bring up Henny Penny and keep her going.

It would probably require three or four of the little birds to equal Henny Penny on a platter, but the French poultrymen claim their dwarves still beat out the feed cost.

Anyway, the Japanese who are great for trying somebody else's idea are buying 850,000 of the French miniatures to see what might be made of the marketing problem.

Nation's Greenbacks
Will Stay That Color

A greenback is a greenback is a greenback. And will be a greenback in the foreseeable future if the United States Treasury is to be believed. There is no reason to suppose otherwise.

There have been rumors that Treasury has plans afoot to pep up U.S. currency with a livelier color scheme. One hears, specifically, of a projected design involving red, blue and brown.

James A. Conlon, director of the Treasury's Bureau of Engraving and Printing, has a personal reaction to that: combining red, blue and brown would, he opines, be "esthetically atrocious." Since esthetic atrocities are not wholly unknown to government, Conlon felt constrained to go on and issue a firm denial quite aside from his color preferences, to wit: It ain't so.

So there it is: a greenback is a greenback is a greenback. Forevermore. Or, at any rate, for the time being. That's comforting, somehow.

It requires a special type of courage for a Soviet citizen to meet with western newsmen in Moscow and warn the West it is inviting suicide if it accepts detente on Soviet terms. That is what Andrei Sakharov did, and underlined his courage by meeting only days after the government had warned it could "no longer stand aside" if Sakharov continued to meet with newsmen to criticize the Kremlin.

Certainly nothing could be gained personally by the man who has been openly critical of the lack of civil liberties in his homeland. Sakharov is one of his country's leading scientists, a physicist who contributed to the development of the Soviet H-bomb. In the normal course of events he could expect special treatment, perhaps honors, from his government by remaining quiet.

Sakharov is one of a growing number of Soviet scientists and artists who take their responsibilities as human beings more seriously than that. Thus it was that Sakharov held his fateful interview with western newsmen.

"Detente without democratization, a detente when the West in fact accepts our rules of the game in this process, such as a detente would be dangerous," Sakharov said.

"It wouldn't solve any of the world's problems and would mean a capitulation to our real or exaggerated strength."

Referring to western deals to extract Soviet oil in exchange for western technology, Sakharov warned:

"By liberating us from problems we can't solve ourselves, we could concentrate on accumulating strength. And as a result, the whole world would be disarmed and facing our uncontrollable bureaucratic apparatus."

It was a frank warning the West can ill afford to ignore. In view of the astute trading capabilities the Soviets demonstrated in grain purchases from the United States, they can be expected to be similarly tough traders in deals involving oil or natural gas.

As a starter, the Soviets have suggested American capital be used to develop Soviet oil reserves, with payment to be made in oil over a number of years. The size of the investment sought is not known, but it would be considerable. Involved are hundreds of miles of pipeline and refining facilities.

It is a project which would increase Soviet oil capabilities almost immediately, while providing some off for export to the U.S. over a protracted period. In dealing with the Soviet Union, as Andrei Sakharov has said, it is not enough to consider a project of this nature only in business terms.

Demand Rising;
Productivity Lags

the product of untold millions of man hours in the nation's universities, in the space program, in defense and in other government and private laboratories throughout the land.

Demand is rising by 12 per cent a year while the capacity to produce is rising only a third as fast.

That obviously leaves three courses open. Cut demand. Find ways to increase production. Or, both.

The economic record of the past several decades tells us that we have been notoriously unsuccessful in curtailing demand nationally, however desirable that may be at times. And when officials have succeeded, they've often done it so clumsily that we've ended up with a recession.

A simple cutback in government spending, for example, seems almost impossible to achieve politically, however much praised by one president or another.

We do have the capability to increase production at a faster pace. We have the know-how in $100 billion in stored "available" research in recent years. This is not the total research and development figure; it is rather the amount of useful research accomplished and stored which men knowledgeable in the field believe could be put to use in industry, on the farms and otherwise in our daily lives — research which has been virtually ignored in major sectors of industry, or not fully utilized.

This research in question is yet the need is there. From time to time one of my engineer friends makes a study of this industry or that, or digs out a study by some team attempting to find out why productivity and production aren't increasing as they might.

In each case known to this reporter, covering in total a veritable fistful of industries, what is abundantly clear is that production (or productivity) could be increased considerably at relatively little cost with the application of existing but not widely known techniques.

DETROIT (AP) — Reports of a "pirate" radio station operating in the Detroit area are being probed by the Federal Communications Commission.

Edward Atens, Detroit FCC director, said Sunday the illegal operation calls itself either WFAG or WLSD and has been heard on various AM frequencies for short periods of time. Atens said the station follows a rock music and talk format.

"I thought we got the boat in search of a noncompetitive solitude!"

Goddard had previously started a newspaper in Philadelphia, but had been forced to flee because of debts and the displeasure of the powerful Benjamin Franklin — guess what, a politician.

When the first edition was printed, the country had a king, George the Third of England. Then along came the Revolution and the first American President, George Washington, who rejected the powers and trappings of a king.

So here we are, two centuries later, with a President whose nonchalant habits and attitudes toward the people seem more like the English George than the American one.

In the meantime, the original paper went through several transfigurations of leadership and direction, even as the country. But some things remain familiar.

George Washington liked it at first; he advertised land for sale in it. But after he had been President for a while he complained that when he drove forth with four horses and two coachmen, the Baltimore printer said Washington befitting his position; when he drove forth with six horses and four postillions, he was accused of having delusions of grandeur. That set the pattern of relations between Presidents and press, and it has been thus ever since. Nixon's two worst flashes of public malice have been directed at the press. After he lost the 1962 California gubernatorial race, he growled that reporters wouldn't have him to kick around any more. And he rudely shoved his former press secretary, Ron Ziegler, last week before a speech in a display of temper which was later officially explained as merely eagerness to see that reporters didn't go in the same door as he did.

The News-American is the second paper to celebrate its bicentennial in advance of the republic; the Hartford (Conn.) Courant is even older.

Dowagiac Boy Drowns Wading In Dewey Lake

SISTER LAKES — A 13-year-old Dowagiac youth, Walter Seratt Jr., drowned last night while wading in Dewey Lake here.

The youth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Seratt, route 2, Dowagiac, would have been a sixth grade student in Kincheloe elementary school, Dowagiac.

Witnesses told Cass sheriff's deputies that young Seratt walked out into water over his head, sank once, surfaced, and sank again. The youth apparently could not swim, witnesses told deputies.

According to deputies, witnesses attempted a rescue, but the youth went under the second time before he could be reached.

The drowning, the seventh in Cass county this year, occurred at Jones Landing off M-152 while Seratt was swimming with his family about 8 p.m.

The body was recovered by sheriff's department divers at 8:55 p.m. about 60 feet off shore in 12 feet of water, deputies said. The youth was pronounced dead by Dr. Charles Koudelka, Dowagiac.

He was born Jan. 25, 1960, in South Bend, Ind., the son of Walter and Phyllis Flanigan Seratt.

Surviving besides his parents are two sisters, Wanda and Cheryl, both at home; his grandparents, Mrs. Alice Seratt of Tennessee and Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Flanigan of Buchanan.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Groner-Lyon funeral home, Dowagiac. Rev. Franklin Prindle will officiate. Burial will be in Hamilton cemetery.

State Educator Speaks Out Integration A Generation Away?

CHELSEA, Mich. (AP) — The president of the State Board of Education says while he backs school integration, he thinks it may be 30 years before it becomes effective.

"There is no question there should be integration," says Gorton Riethmiller. "But the constant mobility of the population makes it very difficult to get a stability of school integration."

Riethmiller recalls there was integration in the Highland Park school district when he served there as deputy superintendent, but adds it was a different situation.

"People had roots then," he said. "People were known by their family: You'd say, 'You are so-and-so's son or brother or nephew.' Today's it's different—you don't know anybody."

"In my opinion it's going to take at least 30 years to achieve integration—we can have token integration but in my opinion it is false to force it.

"But," he adds, "Maybe you have to start someplace."

The board president said the integration issue is out of his group's hands as law must now be passed by the legislature. Riethmiller said the board has been asked to recommend an integration plan but Attorney General Frank Kelley has requested any plan await final court decisions.

Other problems facing the 1973-74 school year, Riethmiller thinks, are no greater than those encountered in recent years.

"Unfortunately we have to begin each school year with... peripheral, emotional problems," said Riethmiller.

"I would assume there will be some problems this fall, but they will all be resolved," he added.

The issues this fall, he said, range from a possible series of teacher strikes to the gasoline shortage and the continuing complexities of integration.

"We have had problems for sometime," Riethmiller recalled.

"At one time it was parochial and another time it was issues of school disruptions. We are continually dealing with situations that don't have much to do with education. These tangential issues are damaging to the total purpose of education.

"The whole purpose of education—providing service to the educable—often appears to be submerged in a sea of 'fiscality' in which it is assumed that the environment for employment supersedes the environment for learning."

Riethmiller was appointed by

A witness told state police

The deaths bring to 14 the number of persons killed in Van Buren traffic accidents in 1973.

Arndt was injured about 7:30 p.m. Saturday near the M-51 entrance ramp to the Interstate in Paw Paw township.

A witness told state police

14 Auto Deaths In Van Buren County In 1973

that a car entering the Interstate veered into the path of the westbound Arndt car. Police theorize that driver of the Arndt car, Rhonda Marie Arndt, 16, swerved to avoid the auto and lost control of her car.

The Arndt car rolled over, throwing Arndt out of the vehicle, state police said.

Arndt was taken to Lake View Community hospital in Paw Paw and transferred to Bronson hospital, Kalamazoo, where he died about 10 p.m. Saturday, state police said.

Miss Arndt was treated for minor injuries and released from the Paw Paw hospital.

The car believed involved in the accident did not stop, according to police reports.

Mrs. Quintero was pronounced dead when the eastbound car in which she was a passenger went off Red Arrow highway, near 56th street, and hit a tree in Lawrence township about 12:55 p.m. Sunday, state police said.

Officers said driver of the car, Petra Aleman Quilla, 41, also of Donna, Texas, apparently lost control of her car after a wheel dropped off the road.

The car went out of control and hit a tree broadside, state police said.

Mrs. Quintero was pronounced dead at the Paw Paw hospital and her daughter, Petra, was listed in "serious" condition today at Bronson hospital.

Funeral services for Mrs. Quintero are pending at the Calvin funeral home, Hartford.

Funeral services for George

Arndt will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Lawrence United Methodist Church with the Rev. Norman Crotser officiating.

Burial will be in Hill cemetery at Lawrence.

Mr. Arndt was born Sept. 3, 1920 in Chicago, the son of Mrs. Donald (Goldie) Decker and the late Otto Arndt.

He was a resident of Lawrence for several years and was employed at Benton Harbor Engineering. He was a member of the Hess-Eastman Post 174 of the American Legion and of the German-American Congress club of Benton Harbor and was for many years a 4-H club leader.

Besides his widow Juanita and his daughter Rhonda, survivors include another daughter, Randy and two sons, Randel and Roger, all at home, and his mother, of rural Lawrence.

Friends may call at the Sisson funeral home in Lawrence until noon Wednesday.

Coast Guard Answers Six Calls

St. Joseph Coast Guard reported six rescue missions over the weekend—two on Saturday and four on Sunday. Most of the calls for assistance by yachtsmen were for boats with motor trouble.

Launching Will Mark New Era In Great Lakes

Huge Carrier Start Of Modern Inland Waters Fleet

STURGEON BAY, Wis. — The Charles E. Wilson, a 680-foot Great Lakes carrier will be christened Thursday in another major step of modernizing the American merchant fleet on inland waters.

The bulk carrier took 20 months to build at a cost of $13 million. It will be owned and operated by the American Steamship company, a subsidiary of General America Transportation Corp. Maiden voyage for the Charles E. Wilson will be from Escanaba to Trenton, Mich., with a cargo of iron ore in September or October.

The self-loader was built by Bay Shipbuilding Corp., a subsidiary of the Manitowoc company, Inc. Shipping executives view the Wilson and others being built on the Great Lakes as the start of an era that will restore the inland fleet to its former prominence. Great Lakes shipbuilding perked up with passage of the Merchant Marine act of 1970, which provides federal assistance to inland shipbuilders. Cost of building and operating new ships had been prohibitive and Great Lakes' builders formerly were excluded from federal help because the Great Lakes shoreline was not designated as a seacoast.

The Merchant Marine act changed that status. Before passage of the act, more than half the merchant ships on the Great Lakes were more than 50 years old.

The Wilson, named for the late Charles L. Wilson, secretary of defense in the Eisenhower administration will have a top speed of 15.3 knots. The six cargo holds have a capacity of 29,000 tons and a discharge rate of 6,600 tons an hour.

Complement will be 24 men, considerably less than on board older Great Lakes vessels of similar size. American Steamship operates 18 self-loading bulk carriers for transporting iron ore, coal, limestone and other commodities.

81 Chickens Killed By Dogs

COLOMA — Three stray dogs apparently tunneled under a fence Saturday night and killed 81 chickens, according to Coloma township police. John Frazee, Carmady road, Coloma, said the chickens were valued at about $3.50 each. He said that about one-half the chickens were heavy breed layers, the rest were fryers. Frazee told police the chickens were inside a fenced area in his yard. Berrien county has a fund set up to reimburse owners of livestock and poultry injured or killed by stray dogs.

Death Followed 3-Day Stint Of Glue Sniffing

BY STEVE McQUOWN
Paw Paw Bureau

PAW PAW — A 15-year-old Paw Paw youth who died here Thursday night had been sniffing a rubber tire cement off and on for three days prior to his death, according to state police.

Police say they believe Perry Whittle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Whittle of Paw Paw, died from the effects of inhaling the rubber cement fumes.

But results of an autopsy are not expected for several weeks, they said yesterday.

State police officers said they interviewed several persons who had seen Perry the day he died, including a woman who lived with her family in a home she rented from the Whittles.

Mrs. Colleen Grover told officers she found Perry and another 16-year-old boy behind a barn sniffing the cement and that Perry was "high" at that time.

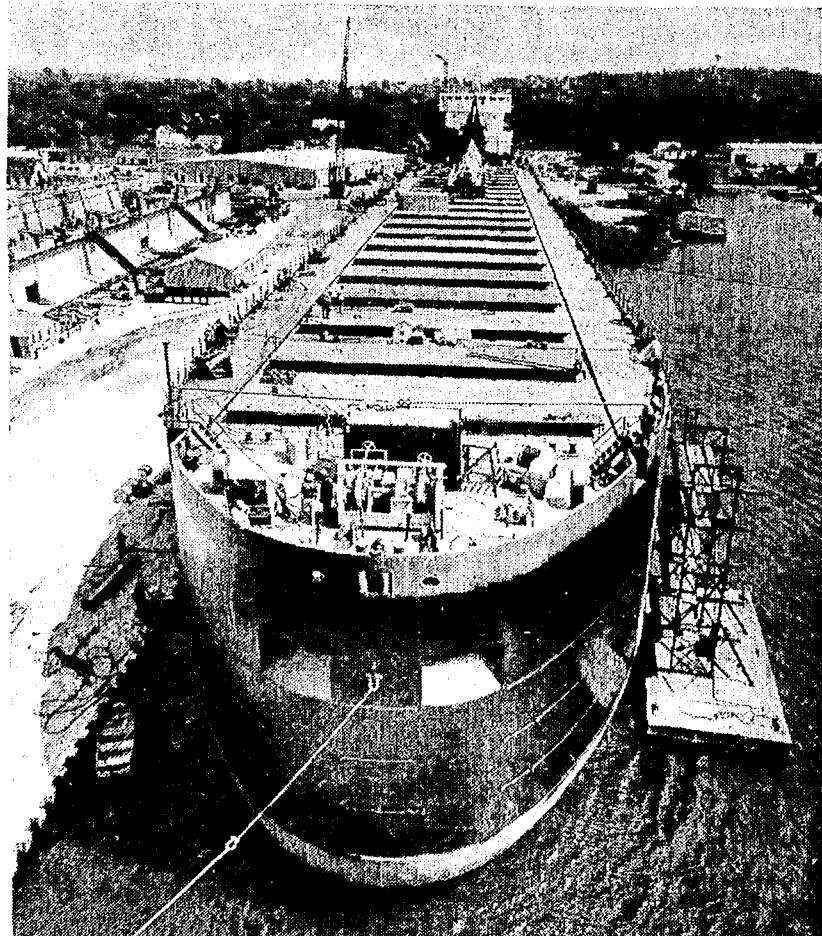

She said Perry told her he had been sniffing the cement for the past three days.

About 3 p.m., Mrs. Grover told officers, Perry went up to a bedroom to rest.

He was found about 7:15 p.m., in an unconscious state, by his 13-year-old brother and was pronounced dead at Lake View community hospital about 8 p.m.

Funeral services for Perry were held today at the First Methodist church in Paw Paw.

Perry's 17-year-old brother Robert died in August, 1971, after allegedly inhaling spray from an aerosol can.

TWO FOOTBALL FIELDS: The self-unloading carrier Charles E. Wilson is 680 feet long and soon will be plying the Great Lakes with 29,700 tons of bulk cargo.

Clear Lake 'Invaded' Parachutists Take Plunge At Buchanan

BY BRANDON BROWN

BUCHANAN — Last Saturday will go down in local history as the day 18 Special Forces parachutists "invaded" Clear lake from the air.

The 18, members of Co. C, 12th Special Forces group, Detachment C of the Army airborne reserves from South Bend, made soft-as-marshmallow landings in the lake in their first water jump.

The exercise produced no injuries and no mishaps except a leaky boat. But there was one hitch — the drop, set for 10 a.m., didn't start until 2 p.m. because of poor visibility at the C-130 Hercules transport takeoff point in South Bend.

"It was one of the best landings I ever made," said Lt. Ted Drier, formerly of Three Oaks and now of Oak Park, Ill. "Soft. It was a thrill."

Sgt. Larry Money of Buchanan called it "Neat."

St. Terry Schmitz of Baroda said it was a "good jump and the landing was terrific. No bumps and bruises from landing."

Also jumping were Master Sgt. Richard Petruschke, formerly of Stevensville, now of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, and Staff Sgt. Dennis Bankowski, formerly of Niles and now of South Bend.

Lt. Thomas Wilson of Benton Harbor assisted with civilian and Berrien sheriff's marine division pickup boats for the parachutists.

Capt. Robert Temayson of South Bend, drop zone safety officer, said Clear lake was picked because it's one of Berrien's larger lakes. The jump was to improve parachutists' proficiency in water landings, he said.

"It was one of the best landings I ever made," said Lt. Ted Drier, formerly of Three Oaks and now of Oak Park, Ill. "Soft. It was a thrill."

Most have had 20 to 100 jumps but Saturday was the first over water.

The parachutists jumped by threes and fours from the camouflage-color Hercules at about 1,250 feet and plopped into the lake a moment later, where they were quickly hauled aboard waiting boats and helped military and sheriff's marine personnel while away the long wait before the jump.

The jump was watched by throngs of residents and visitors.

Deputy Tom O'Neill headed the Berrien sheriff's marine division unit at Clear lake, including Deputies David Nespit, James Rainen, Paul Watt, Michael Watts, Robert Dunn,

and St. Joseph Coast Guardsman Jim Johnson.

The leaky boat was owned by Lt. Drier. The 48-foot inboard-outboard was towed ashore.

Son Slain; Father Held

CASSOPOLIS — A warrant for second degree murder has been issued against Tharvel Alfred, 57, route 3, Brownsville street, Cassopolis, in connection with the shooting death of his 18-year-old son early Sunday morning, according to Cass county Prosecutor Michael Dodge.

Cass sheriff's deputies reported the son, Tharvel Alfred Jr., was shot about 4:10 a.m. Sunday at his father's address, where he also lived.

Dodge said one shot was fired in the shooting and that a .38 caliber pistol is believed to have been used.

He said the older Alfred was to be arraigned this morning on the second degree murder charge in Fourth district court, Cassopolis.

The prosecutor said the older Alfred was apprehended at his home. Details of the shooting and what preceded it are still under investigation, Dodge said.

He said an autopsy was performed on the victim yesterday. Deputies reported the victim's body has been taken to Connally funeral home, Cassopolis.
